CIA chief says trade can impede Soviets

WASHINGTON - The head of the CIA, William J. Casey, said yesterday that the West could thwart a Soviet "recipe of subversion" in the Third World by encouraging a global free market. Casey said more nations in the developing world are moving toward democracy and freer economies because they see the Soviet economy "grinding to a halt." Casey addressed the 17th annual Leadership Conference of the Center for the Study of the Presidency in Atlanta. A copy of his remarks was released in Washington. (UPI)
